Remote control cars give toddlers this option as they learn to coordinate the movements of the controller with the vehicle. Plus, it's ridiculously fun to see a toddler clumsily chasing a car around the house or courtyard with wonder and surprise! From simple, two-button starter RC vehicles to all-terrain stunt cars, here are my 11 favorite remote control cars for toddlers: The Best Toddler Remote Cars for All Ages 1. RC Cars Stunt Car (Most Entertaining - $$) Why It's Great: This is an enviable remote control car among kids and adults! The stunt car does pretty amazing 360-degree spins, flips to drive on both sides, and tumbles up or down almost any terrain. It has a funky, bright design that matches the car's personality. This company recommends remote control toys for children ages 6 and up, but children as young as 2 have a total blast with it. The controls are a little more complicated and take some time to figure out. But any child who sees how entertaining this remote car is will be motivated to try it. Remember: This car does not come with batteries. It's also a little more complicated to check than other cars. Good for: Slightly older toddlers or toddlers who have good motor skills. Look at Amazon.com → Control Construction Dump Truck (Best Dump Truck - $$) Why it's great: Something a little different from the typical remote control car, this fully functioning dump truck gets kids outside to play in the dirt (or, if you're not into it, just dump Duplo Legos!) The bright yellow truck moves in all directions, lights up and plays sounds. The truck is detailed and realistic in its movements with an operate truck bed, allowing the children to create their own mini construction zone. Perfect for indoor or outdoor use, the dumper is played with best where it should be-in the sand and dirt! This toy is easy to use and easy enough for a 2 or 3 year old. Remember: The dumper and remote control require batteries that are not included. There is an on/off button to help save energy. Although this vehicle is large in sand or dirt, it doesn't work as well on grass. Good for: Toddlers who love trucks and love being outside! Show on Amazon.com → 3. DEERC Remote Control Take Apart Toys (Most Educational - $$) Why it's great: You can't beat fun and educational! Not only is this a great starter remote control car, it's listed as a STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics) toy that teaches young kids how to take apart and rebuild their vehicles. This toy is super engaging – it moves, plays sounds, lights up and includes removable people. The pieces are chunky and easy to assemble with low speed drill, helping young children improve their coordination and fine motor skills. This toy comes with either a fire truck or dump truck, along with a remote control, a drill, a wrench, and two action figures that provide a variety of fun to keep your toddler busy. Plus, it's easy to use! Although a manual is included, most children jump right in without instruction. Remember: Buy lots of batteries! The vehicle, remote control and drill require all batteries and none are included. Good for: Active kids who love to pillage, hunt, destroy and rebuild! Look at Amazon.com → 4. Ride-on Truck with Parenting Remote Control (Most Realistic - $$$) Why It's Great: This is a toddler parenting dream! This ride-on remote-controlled car allows you to give your little one a feeling that they're driving a real vehicle. And you can choose to let your child drive manually or control it with you via remote control. We found that our son would spend endless hours sitting in his ride-on car pretending to drive, even when it wasn't on, and his little friends would ask their parents to come to our house just so they could sit in it! In addition, you can connect it to your music so your toddler can jam out while driving. Remember: This vehicle runs well on hard surfaces, but not so well on grass, and the included rechargeable battery lasts no more than about 1 hour. Good for: Any aged toddler through preschoolers. Also a lot of fun for parents. Look at → 5. My first Cartoon RC Remote Control Race Car (Best Value - $) Why it is With simple controls and lots of ways to interact, this is an excellent remote control car for toddlers! This colorful car features dips, music and headlights, as well as three removable characters for your child to play with. The two-button steering wheel controller is fun and easy for small children to use as they make the car go forward, back, left and right. Designed for toddlers 18 months and over, this remote car is fast, safe and durable! The remote control has a long range, too, which helps your child steer this vehicle around the house with ease. Liberty Import offers quite a few vehicle options including a train, race car, firetruck, plane and police car. Remember: Be sure to buy batteries as they are not included. Both the car and the remote control require batteries. Good for: Young toddlers who crave entertainment and work on coordination. Look at Amazon.com → 6. KidZone Ride-On Bumper Car (most exciting for indoor winter months - $$$) Why it's great: Okay... So this isn't exactly a car, but it functionally provides you, and your kiddos, with a great way for your tot to move throughout your home and entertain yourself for hours. The parents' remote control allows you to run the show, or if you feel that your little ones can take the reins, they can control their car via a simple joystick all by themselves. It turns 360 degrees, has built-in safety features, and is safe for small over 18 months. Moms and dads say bumpers won't scuff up your walls, it builds your kiddos motor skills, spatial cognition, and allows them to fly throughout the house without help. If you have a few kiddos buy one for each, then they can get the full-on amusement park bumper-car experience. Remember: If your home has stairs be sure to secure a gate so that there are no unfortunate tumbles. Good for: Toddlers need an indoor ride-on remote control car. Show on Amazon.com → 7. Rock Wheels Bentley (Most Fancy - $$$) Why it's amazing: This super beautiful luxurious vehicle isn't that expensive. It's another great option if you're looking for something more than just the standard remote control car. It has two scissors opening doors, functional headlights, and lots of funny sounds that will make your kiddos feel like they're driving a fancy sports car just like the one mom and dad wish they had )! It's safe for toddlers of all ages and mom and dad can control it via remote control, so there won't be unnecessary crashes. Remember: During the winter months, we simply take out the batteries and the children play with it inside for hours in stationary mode. Good for: Toddlers and parents who want to enjoy a super luxury trip. Look at Amazon.com → 8. RC High-Speed Racer (Most Kick-butt - $$) Why it's great: Honestly, what's better than a hot pink monster truck? I mean, this car is so cool, fast and powerful that it will keep your tot engaged for hours. It's great for off-roading so if your is something like mine (dirt, stones, stones, it will have no problems at all to take it on. It also works well indoors as the front wheels protrude a little longer than the bumper prevents head-on collisions with your walls. This is a bad-ass vehicle for kiddos who want to conquer the roads. If you're not into hot pink, here's a link to another (equally cool) option. Remember: The battery runs out quickly, so be sure to turn it off when not in use. Good for: Toddlers who want a seriously good off-road RC car. Look at Amazon.com → 9. Haktogs Remote Stunt Car (most fun of the night - $) Why it's great: This car is cool! Take the thrill of remote stunt cars and add an awesome, night-friendly LED light-up feature. It's as much fun to take in the fireworks-like display as it does the stunts! On top of all the spins, tricks and flips, the oversized clear decks and bubble windshield fill the room with colorful, flashing lights. The vehicle is available in two different colours and two frequencies, so more than one child can play at a time. A flexible antenna, USB charger and power-off music switch for quiet playback also make this a parenting game. The company recommends this car for ages 3 and up. Although this is the most expensive car on the list, we believe the excitement is worth it (and you can find it for sale)! Remember: It takes about 1.5 hours to charge this toy for about 20 minutes of play time, although the company says this is half the charging time and doubles many competitors' games. Good for: High-energy children stimulated by light and sounds. Look at Amazon.com → 10. Hape Wooden Remote Control Engine Train (Most Ingenius - $) Why it's great: Kids love trains, and this really special sustainably built remote train allows your little ones to not only watch his/her train go around the tracks, but to control that train itself. How? Of an app on Mom or Dad's phone. The app allows your child to control the speed and direction of the train building important spacial skills as they figure out how best to navigate around the wooden tracks. Amazon listing provides a wonderful video that explains exactly how it works. Remember: It requires an APP, so either you tot will have to borrow your phone/ipad or have one designated for such activities. Good for: Toddlers who love trains. Look at Amazon.com → 11. Disney Junior Minnie Mouse Roadster RC Car (Most Feminine Vehicle - $) Why It's Great: It's Nice to See a Beautiful Pink Remote Control Car! Many of the earlier cars come in primary colors that are great for any child, but this Disney Junior Minnie Mouse Roadster is a little more feminine, mimicking Minnie's vehicle from the Mickey and Roadster Racers cartoon. With a very recognizable character at the wheel, children can easily relate to the show and take Minnie on their own adventures! The two-button remote control is simple to manage, sending Minnie and her car straight or in circles. The durable design, the easy and the best price at our our Make this a great starter RC vehicle! Remember: This is another remote control car that requires batteries. None are included. The remote control has only one frequency, so using more than one car at a time can cause the signals to cross. Good for: A first time remote car user who prefers a feminine flair. Look at Amazon.com → Frequently asked questions about remote control cars 1. Why let a toddler play with a remote control car? Believe it or not, your child learns a lot from racing and crashing a remote control car. These vehicles teach young children about fine motor skills and cognitive development. They learn to use their minds with their hands, how to move an object in different directions, and cause and effect. RC vehicles also introduce toddlers to STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics) concepts, such as movement, speed and experimentation (What happens if I tell my car to drive over rocks?) Plus, they're funny! 2. What is the earliest age a toddler can use an RC? This depends a little on the child. The earliest recommended age is about 18 months old, but the best age seems to be about 3 years old. After 18 months, a child can stand and walk, press buttons, and respond to actions or sounds. They usually enjoy interacting with a remote control car, but they can't use it as effectively as an older child. At 3, they have developed their fine and gross motor skills so they will play with more challenging and complex toys. They also have a better understanding of what the remote control will do with the vehicle. 3. How long does a remote control car battery normally last? This varies depending on the vehicle, its features and the type of battery it uses. On average, a fully charged or new battery will last for about 15 to 20 minutes of consecutive playback. 4. What are the main features to consider when buying an RC for a small child? Think about your child's age, how they can use the car, and what features will intrigue them. You want a speedy car? Will sounds and lights attract your toddler or scare them? Do you want a one-piece vehicle or many parts? If you want to play with more than one car at the same time, if that is the case, make sure that the vehicle offers a different frequency. Do you prefer a car with rechargeable batteries? Considering these things before buying RC will help your child enjoy the vehicle more when they get it. 5. Can an 18 month old use a remote control car? Yes, there are safe and user-friendly starter remote control cars that an 18-month-old can enjoy. These are often the vehicles with simple remote controls that offer one or two buttons. 6. What are some safety tips for using remote control cars? Remember that your child will be chasing the remote car, so be sure he or she is monitored and in a clear area away from things they may fall on or pause. This is a toy with an engine and batteries, so that these things are not exposed to your young child. Many of these vehicles have several removable detachable who may become a choking hazard, then again, monitor your child as he or she plays. It's also a good idea to avoid pets when your child is playing with a remote control car, as they can aggravate your cat or dog. Conclusion Remote control cars can be a lot of fun if you can match the right kind of car with your child. Consider your child's age and how complicated the toy is – older toddlers or children with older siblings will easily adapt to a more challenging remote control vehicle. Think of your child's likes and dislikes. Do they like being outside? Do they enjoy tinkering with things? Do they often use the same toys when playing with siblings or friends? Are they excited about music, sounds and lights? Some RC cars combine all these features, while others are more simplified. Choose what makes the most sense for your child. Also consider battery consumption and longevity! Do you prefer a rechargeable vehicle or a vehicle that uses batteries? Each option has pros and cons. When you decide which model is best, it's just a matter of bringing it home, and your toddler will light up when they learn how to maneuver this new toy! You also like our other reviews...
